CSIS 105: Introduction to Computing

An overview of computing as a human activity emphasizing the use of computers as tools to meet the needs of individuals and groups. Topics for study and discussion will include the history and development of computers, the impact of computers on the quality of life, information processing using computers, and ethical issues with respect to the use of information.

Credits: 3
Program: Computer Science
Semester Offered: Spring