

PSYC 270: Physiological Psychology

This course introduces the biological bases of behavior. It explores the different scientific methods to research overall brain functioning and its link to behavior. In addition, students will learn how specific neurological systems might account to processes such as learning, memory, emotions, and psychological illnesses.

Credits: 3

Prerequisites:

PSYC 212

PSYC 220

Program: Psychology

Semester Offered: Fall